Permitted land uses include active nature conservation, outdoor leisure and recreation activities without creating new infrastructure, dryland farming in areas already designated for this purpose, as well as both extensive and intensive livestock farming in accordance with Article 148, with the possibility of expanding livestock operations.~Forestry uses are also permitted, including the exploitation and extraction of non-timber secondary forest products. Sanitation, water supply, electricity, and telephone infrastructure are feasible through the corresponding environmental impact assessment.~Regulations allow the construction of a detached single-family home linked to the agricultural operation, with a minimum plot size of 30,000 m2, as well as the development of rural accommodations of groups A, B, and C in existing buildings.~An exceptional opportunity for those seeking a vast piece of land with character, immersed in nature, and offering a wide range of potential uses in one of the most extensive and scenically rich municipalities of the Region of Murcia.~This advertisement is not binding and may contain errors.
