In general, these are moderately swell beaches with fine, medium or coarse-grained golden or dark sand, and it is also possible to find some gravel. The occupancy rate is usually high or medium, especially during the summer months, when the arrival of tourists is concentrated. The traditional gastronomy of Marbella is that of the Malaga coast and is based on fish. The most typical dish is fried fish, which can be made with anchovies, horse mackerel, red mullet and squid, among others, as well as sardine skewers made in boats and with a wood fire. In addition, gazpacho and ajoblanco are also typical. In confectionery, the oil cakes, the wine donuts, theborrachuelos, the torrijas and the churros stand out. Apart from this traditional cuisine, there are restaurants in Marbella from almost all regions of the world and international cuisine, nouvelle cuisine and fusion. Living here is a luxury to enjoy every day in an environment full of services at your fingertips, restaurants, shops, promenade,~ sports centers, schools, taxis, bus stops, etc.
